

PORT & DESSERT WINES

Port wine derives its name from the city of Porto located in the Douro Valley in northern Portugal. Port wines are usually made from a combination of up to five different grape varieties, Touriga Nacional, Tinto Cao, Tina Barroca, Tinta Rozi, and Touriga Fanacesas. Port tends to have a much richer, sweeter and heavier flavour than other wines.

Port wines are fortified which means that additional grape spirit is added to the blend during processing to increase the alcohol content. This makes much higher alcohol content than other wines.

There are several different classifications of port wine based on the aging process.

LOCAL SPRING WATER

Willow Water's mineral content is a unique blue print that reflects the geology of the Cartmel area just below the surface on Cartmel Fell lays a deep layer of peat formed from the remains of a prehistoric forest of white willow trees. This ancient woodland once covered the southern Lake District in a dense canopy.
